

A look at the Titanic Tragedy

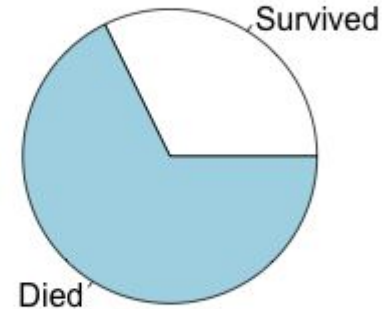

Parth Mehrotra

In 1912 a massive cruise ship suffered a terrible tragedy

Most of the passenger's didn't survive.

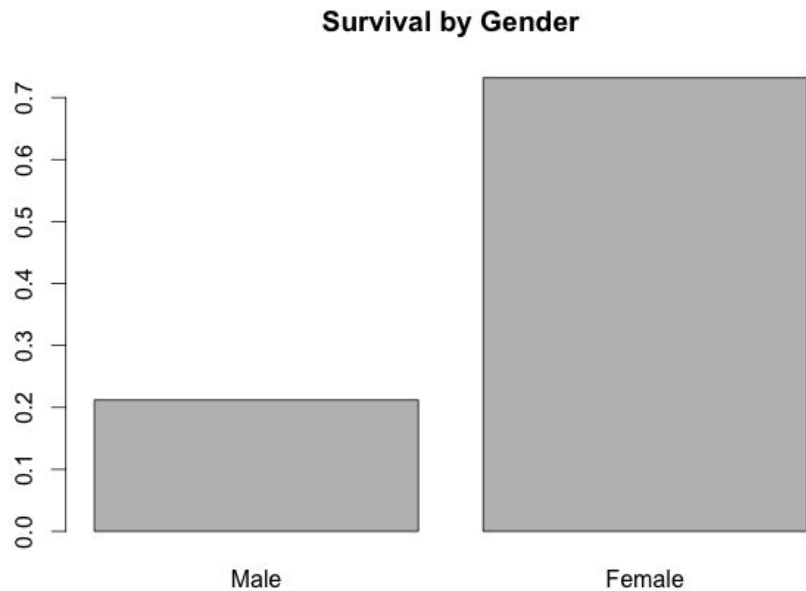

There were several groups of people on board. Men, women, adults, children, wealthy, poor. Let's look into how each of these respective groups fared.

Titanic Survival Rate

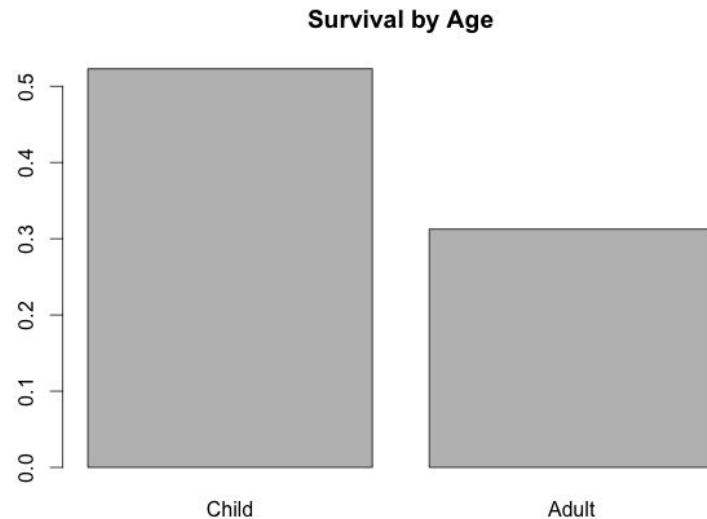

Gender

It seems like almost every female on board made it to safety. This could point to several factors. Perhaps the crew was mostly male. Maybe more males were willing to help their female counterparts. Perhaps women were able to keep their composure better than the men during this crisis situation.

Survival by Age

Like the women on board, more children were able to make it to safety than the adult population. Perhaps the adults were able to get the children to safety, perhaps every child had at least 1 other person looking out for them (parents). Or perhaps children also handle this situation better.

Survival by Class

Passengers in first class were able to make it to safety more reliably than the passengers in the other classes. Every single child (not shown) in first class was able to make it to safety. Maybe this was because of where the first class was located.
